

About me

I am currently studying BDES (HONS) Interaction Design at the Belfast school of art, looking to secure a placement position to use and further develop my skills and knowledge in the field of design in a practical and fast-paced environment. My career goal is to assume a role which allows me to push my abilities in UI and UX design.

I have always had a passion for design in all aspects, everything from UI and UX to branding and illustration. But all ideas have to stem from something and I have the capabilities to come up with forward thinking ideas and that all comes from things like concepting and prototyping. These give me the ability to have an open mind when thinking of design.

I also see myself as a storyteller, all design is telling a story, with the right concept and tools your story can be brought to life in unique and informative ways.

Interests

Outside of my work I have various other interests. I like to stay active (when I can) through things like the gym. I used to play for a basketball team when I went to school, that gave me some quality skills in terms of working in a team environment.

I have an interest in illustration and creating things, it isn't something I thought I would have been interested in this time a few years ago because I was never very good at drawing in school, but recently I have discovered how much you can do through illustration, not only expressing ideas and concepts but telling stories as well.
